

WEEK FOUR
MATTHEW 14:22-33

The disciples see Jesus walking on water.

WEEK FOUR
MATTHEW 14:22-33

The disciples see Jesus walking on water.

REMEMBER THIS:

"With God all things are possible."

MATTHEW 19:26, NIV

SAY THIS:

Who can do anything?
JESUS CAN DO ANYTHING.

DO THIS:

Hold up the shampoo bottle (or other object that sinks in water) and ask if it will float or sink. Drop it in the bath water and watch it sink. Repeat this with several other objects that sink. Ask your child what happens when we jump in the water. We have to swim or we sink! But guess what! Jesus can walk on water because Jesus can do ANYTHING!

REMEMBER THIS:

"With God all things are possible."

MATTHEW 19:26, NIV

SAY THIS:

Who can do anything?
JESUS CAN DO ANYTHING.

DO THIS:

Hold up the shampoo bottle (or other object that sinks in water) and ask if it will float or sink. Drop it in the bath water and watch it sink. Repeat this with several other objects that sink. Ask your child what happens when we jump in the water. We have to swim or we sink! But guess what! Jesus can walk on water because Jesus can do ANYTHING!

BASIC TRUTH:

JESUS WANTS TO BE MY FRIEND FOREVER.

BASIC TRUTH:

JESUS WANTS TO BE MY FRIEND FOREVER.

ENTITLED PARENTS

By Carey Nieuwhof

It's one thing to work on helping your kids fight an attitude of entitlement, but let's face it, to some extent, they learn the behavior from us. If that's true, what can you do to fight entitlement in your own life? The more you live out the values you want to see in your kids, the better chance your kids have of living that out, too.

It's so critical we combat entitlement because entitlement kills our ability to experience two critical things in life: gratitude and joy. None of us would sign up our kids to live their lives without gratitude or joy, yet it's surprising how many adults live without either. Entitlement does that.

First, entitled people are never grateful people. If you believe you have something coming to you, it's hard to receive it as a gift, a bonus, an unexpected benefit or even a surprise.

Second, entitled people experience very little joy. Because gratitude is absent, so is delight. It's so very hard to find pleasure in what you have because you had it coming to you,

Here are three things that have helped me fight entitlement when I feel it creeping in:

- 1. Decide that no one owes you anything. No one owes you a job. No one owes you love or respect. No one owes you kindness. In fact, God doesn't owe you anything. Instead, start to see everything that comes to you as a gift. You will cherish and value all of those things and especially your relationships much more deeply.

- 2. Be generous. Entitled people don't share well. In fact, they hoard. Giving money away and sharing the things you have can help break the back of greed and the idea that you deserve everything that's come your way.

- 3. Hold what you have loosely. I regularly remind myself that all the work I do, the relationships I have, and my possessions are a privilege and a trust given to me by God and other people around me. And if they are taken away, that is fine, because I will have what matters most: a deep relationship with God and the people closest to me. Holding things loosely reminds me that they are on loan, and not entirely deserved.

These three things help me combat entitlement in my own heart as a parent. I hope that as my kids see me battle entitlement in my life, it helps them battle it in theirs. How about you?

.....
For more blog posts and parenting resources, visit: ParentCue.org

PARENT CUE

Download the free Parent Cue App AVAILABLE FOR IOS AND ANDROID DEVICES

ENTITLED PARENTS

By Carey Nieuwhof

It's one thing to work on helping your kids fight an attitude of entitlement, but let's face it, to some extent, they learn the behavior from us. If that's true, what can you do to fight entitlement in your own life? The more you live out the values you want to see in your kids, the better chance your kids have of living that out, too.

It's so critical we combat entitlement because entitlement kills our ability to experience two critical things in life: gratitude and joy. None of us would sign up our kids to live their lives without gratitude or joy, yet it's surprising how many adults live without either. Entitlement does that.

First, entitled people are never grateful people. If you believe you have something coming to you, it's hard to receive it as a gift, a bonus, an unexpected benefit or even a surprise.

Second, entitled people experience very little joy. Because gratitude is absent, so is delight. It's so very hard to find pleasure in what you have because you had it coming to you,

Here are three things that have helped me fight entitlement when I feel it creeping in:

- 1. Decide that no one owes you anything. No one owes you a job. No one owes you love or respect. No one owes you kindness. In fact, God doesn't owe you anything. Instead, start to see everything that comes to you as a gift. You will cherish and value all of those things and especially your relationships much more deeply.

- 2. Be generous. Entitled people don't share well. In fact, they hoard. Giving money away and sharing the things you have can help break the back of greed and the idea that you deserve everything that's come your way.

- 3. Hold what you have loosely. I regularly remind myself that all the work I do, the relationships I have, and my possessions are a privilege and a trust given to me by God and other people around me. And if they are taken away, that is fine, because I will have what matters most: a deep relationship with God and the people closest to me. Holding things loosely reminds me that they are on loan, and not entirely deserved.

These three things help me combat entitlement in my own heart as a parent. I hope that as my kids see me battle entitlement in my life, it helps them battle it in theirs. How about you?

.....
For more blog posts and parenting resources, visit: ParentCue.org

PARENT CUE

Download the free Parent Cue App AVAILABLE FOR IOS AND ANDROID DEVICES