

WEEK FIVE

FATHER AND OLDER BROTHER • LUKE 15:21-32

WEEK FIVE

FATHER AND OLDER BROTHER • LUKE 15:21-32

ASK THIS:

WHAT DO YOU LOSE IF YOU DON'T FORGIVE?

DO THIS:

It's true that forgiveness is hard. But forgiving someone isn't just about them, it's about you, too! When you forgive, you can have peace. Forgiveness sets both you and the other person free. Are you missing out on something right now that you could change through forgiveness? Pray that God would show you any place in your life where you're holding onto anger and help you forgive.

REMEMBER THIS:

"Put up with one another. Forgive one another if you are holding something against someone. Forgive, just as the Lord forgave you."

COLOSSIANS 3:13, NIV

FORGIVENESS:
DECIDING THAT SOMEONE WHO HAS WRONGED YOU DOESN'T HAVE TO PAY

ASK THIS:

WHAT DO YOU LOSE IF YOU DON'T FORGIVE?

DO THIS:

It's true that forgiveness is hard. But forgiving someone isn't just about them, it's about you, too! When you forgive, you can have peace. Forgiveness sets both you and the other person free. Are you missing out on something right now that you could change through forgiveness? Pray that God would show you any place in your life where you're holding onto anger and help you forgive.

REMEMBER THIS:

"Put up with one another. Forgive one another if you are holding something against someone. Forgive, just as the Lord forgave you."

COLOSSIANS 3:13, NIV

FORGIVENESS:
DECIDING THAT SOMEONE WHO HAS WRONGED YOU DOESN'T HAVE TO PAY

PARENTING ISN'T A FORMULA

By Tim Walker

I'm not going to pretend that this parenting thing is easy. That if you do all the right things, everything works out great. Because people don't work that way. Relationships don't work that way. If you combine A+B, you don't always get C. That's the way algebra works, not parenting.

Sometimes parenting means walking through some smelly, ugly stuff. Sometimes you lie awake in bed, pleading with God to protect, to change, to stir the heart of your kid. Sometimes you grieve for the child you once knew. Or the relationship you once shared.

Because as much as we talk about fighting for the heart, and about pursuing a relationship with your kid, sometimes that relationship is one-sided. You're going to give and get nothing in return. You're going to love and not receive love back. You're going to hurt. For some, it lasts for a season. A result of hormones and uncertainty. For others, it last years.

But you fight for, not with your child. You fight with prayer asking Him to pursue your child as much as He pursued you. You fight by holding tight to God's Word, the Bible. You fight with truth. You remind them who they are. Who God made them to be.

Sometimes I read articles and blogs and I think, "You just don't get it. You make parenting sound so easy, but it's not." Parenting isn't physically exhausting as your child gets older. But it sure is emotionally.

There are all kinds of emotions. Fear. Anger. Frustration. And sometimes all of that is in the course of one exchange when they walk in the door. It's learning to let go, and hold on. And not being sure which is which.

Being a dad has given me perspective to the Father heart of God. How He loves us, even when we hurt Him. Reject Him. Why? Because we're His.

Parenting isn't always filled with shiny, happy people holding hands. It's not formulaic, always resulting in the ideal result. But I'm not sure that it was ever meant to be that way because the reality reminds us that we can't do this alone, that we need a God who is bigger than us. And He is the God who loves both child and parent beyond our comprehension.

For more blog posts and parenting resources, visit: ParentCue.org

PARENTING ISN'T A FORMULA

By Tim Walker

I'm not going to pretend that this parenting thing is easy. That if you do all the right things, everything works out great. Because people don't work that way. Relationships don't work that way. If you combine A+B, you don't always get C. That's the way algebra works, not parenting.

Sometimes parenting means walking through some smelly, ugly stuff. Sometimes you lie awake in bed, pleading with God to protect, to change, to stir the heart of your kid. Sometimes you grieve for the child you once knew. Or the relationship you once shared.

Because as much as we talk about fighting for the heart, and about pursuing a relationship with your kid, sometimes that relationship is one-sided. You're going to give and get nothing in return. You're going to love and not receive love back. You're going to hurt. For some, it lasts for a season. A result of hormones and uncertainty. For others, it last years.

But you fight for, not with your child. You fight with prayer asking Him to pursue your child as much as He pursued you. You fight by holding tight to God's Word, the Bible. You fight with truth. You remind them who they are. Who God made them to be.

Sometimes I read articles and blogs and I think, "You just don't get it. You make parenting sound so easy, but it's not." Parenting isn't physically exhausting as your child gets older. But it sure is emotionally.

There are all kinds of emotions. Fear. Anger. Frustration. And sometimes all of that is in the course of one exchange when they walk in the door. It's learning to let go, and hold on. And not being sure which is which.

Being a dad has given me perspective to the Father heart of God. How He loves us, even when we hurt Him. Reject Him. Why? Because we're His.

Parenting isn't always filled with shiny, happy people holding hands. It's not formulaic, always resulting in the ideal result. But I'm not sure that it was ever meant to be that way because the reality reminds us that we can't do this alone, that we need a God who is bigger than us. And He is the God who loves both child and parent beyond our comprehension.

For more blog posts and parenting resources, visit: ParentCue.org